Anti-Money Laundering (AML) refers to the collection of laws, law enforcement, processes, policies, and regulations that prevent illegally obtained money from entering the financial system by criminals, money launders, terrorist financing and through other illegal activities, etc.

Preamble

The Prevention of Money Laundering Act, 2002 (PMLA) forms the core of the legal framework put in place by India to combat money laundering. PMLA and the Rules notified there under came into force with effect from July 1, 2005. Director, FIU-IND and Director (Enforcement) have been conferred with exclusive and concurrent powers under relevant sections of the Act to implement the provisions of the Act.

Section 3 of the Prevention of Money Laundering (PML) Act 2002 has defined the “Offence of money laundering” as under:

"Whosoever directly or indirectly attempts to indulge or knowingly assists or knowingly is party or is actually involved in any process or activity connected with the proceeds of crime and projecting it as untainted property shall be guilty of offence of money laundering"

Money launders use the financial system for cleansing 'dirty money' obtained from criminal activities with the objective of hiding/disguising its source. The process of money laundering involves creating a series of financial transactions so as to hide the origin and true nature of these funds.

For the purpose of this document, the term 'money laundering' would also cover financial transactions where the end use of funds goes for terrorist financing irrespective of the source of the funds.

Obligations under Prevention of Money Laundering [PML] Act 2002

Section 12 of PML Act 2002 places certain obligations on every financial institution and intermediary which include:

(i) Maintaining a record of prescribed transactions
(ii) Furnishing information of prescribed transactions to the specified Authority
(iii) Verifying and maintaining records of the identity of its clients
(iv) Preserving records in respect of (i), (ii), (iii) above for a period of 10 years from the date of cessation of transactions with the clients.

Stages of Money Laundering:

There are three stages of money laundering introducing laundered funds into the financial system:

1) Placement.

The placement stage marks the beginning of the money laundering process (a.k.a. the money laundering stages), where dirty money is introduced into the financial system. This stage is considered the most vulnerable for criminals, as they must find ways to deposit large amounts of cash without raising suspicion, like Depositing cash in smaller amounts to avoid detection.

2) Layering.

Layering is the second stage of the money laundering stages in which criminals engage in a series of transactions to create confusion and distance the funds from their criminal origin. This can involve, transferring money between multiple bank accounts, often in different locations and jurisdictions.

The objective of layering is to create a complex web of financial transactions that makes it extremely difficult for law enforcement to trace the source of the illicit funds. Criminals can further shield themselves from detection and prepare to reinfuse their laundered funds into the legitimate economy after successfully traversing the layering stage.

3) Integration.

Integration is the final stage of the money laundering process, in which the laundered money is reintroduced into the legitimate financial system, often through investments in real estate, luxury assets, or business ventures. At this point, the funds appear to have been acquired from legitimate sources, making it difficult for authorities to distinguish between legal and illegal assets.
